Rummage sale raises $2,000

Money raised to help violence victims

By Ashley Hoogstraten
Activities Editor

HOPE Coalition Against Domestic Violence of East Central Illinois sold $2,000 worth of donated goods at a rummage sale to benefit their organization over the weekend.

The rummage sale took place at the Cross County Mall in Mattoon from May 19 through May 21.

"We are so grateful," Angie Hunt, director of housing for HOPE, remarked on the event's success.

Hunt said that there were a variety of things that were sold at the sale.

"We had a lot of name brand clothing that people really loved buying," Hunt said.

Clothing and furniture were the two most common items that were donated and put up for sale, but there were also a plethora of other items throughout the sale.

All of the funds collected during the rummage sale will go toward continuing services for domestic violence victims in East Central Illinois, Hunt said.

The HOPE staff also had the help of many different local organizations and even a class during the event.

The Retired Senior Volunteer Program, Salisbury Church, Dr. Lisa Taylor's Disadvantaged Family class and the Charleston Junior Woman's Club were all contributing factors to the success of the event.

FREEDOM TO MARRY

Campaign still growing with 100,000th signature

By Melissa Sturtevant
News Editor

May 12 marked the day that Caroline Kennedy became the 100,000th signer on a letter to President Barack Obama.

The letter urges President Obama to allow committed gay and lesbian couples join in matrimony, according to a press release from the Freedom to Marry campaign.

The campaign is a nationwide effort trying to put a stop to "federal marriage discrimination," according to the campaign's website.

According to a Gallup.com poll posted on May 20, for the first time, the majority of Americans are in support of legalizing marriage for gay and lesbian couples. However, inflation of support on the issue was due to the changing view of Democrats and independents. Republicans did not have much of a change in viewpoint from the previous year.

According to the poll, in 2010 56 percent of Democrats thought same-sex marriage should be legal, and this year that number increased by 13 percent to 69 percent.

Independents went from 49 percent of the party's members supporting the legalization of same-sex marriage in 2010 to 59 percent in 2011.

Republicans stayed the same at 28 percent saying same-sex marriage should be legal in both 2010 and 2011, according to the Gallup poll.

The poll's results also showed that as people get older, their support for legalizing same-sex marriage drops.

Terri Fredrick, a member of EIU Pride, said via email that she imagines that most people in the group would be in support of legalizing same-sex marriage. Fredrick also said that EIU Pride as a group hasn't taken a stance on any individual political issue.

The EIU Pride group will begin meeting regularly again the fall on Mondays.

Many celebrities have signed the letter urging the President to legalize same-sex marriage. Jane Lynch and her wife Lara Embry, Anne Hathaway, Sara Bareilles,

"You can offer hope to millions of young gay and lesbian Americans who are facing discrimination. You can tell them that their future is bright."

Excerpt from Freedom to Marry letter and Lance Bass are among the celebrities to sign the letter.

The letter thanks President Obama for taking a stance, alongside the attorney general, by saying that discriminating against same-sex marriage is unconstitutional.

"You can offer hope to millions of young gay and lesbian Americans who are facing discrimination. You can tell them that their future is bright, that they, too, will be able to grow up and marry the person that they love, that the pursuit of happiness truly belongs to all of us," said the letter. "Marriage brings not only public respect and personal significance, but also a safety net of legal protections, rights, and responsibilities for which there is no substitute."

According to the Freedom to Marry campaign's press release, family members of gay and lesbian couples, the couples themselves and supporters will deliver the letter this spring along with stories about same-sex couples and family photos.

AWARD

Professor honored with Illinois geography award

By Jennifer Brown
Administration Editor

Michael Cornebise, department chair of geology and geography, was honored with the Distinguished Geographer Award April 29.

The Distinguished Geographer Award is presented at the Illinois Geographical Society's annual meeting, which took place at Western Illinois University April 28-30.

Cornebise studies the population and migration issues of people in cultural areas, and looks at their geographical factors.

"I've done work with Amish groups and Mennonite groups," Cornebise said. "I look at settlement patterns and take in account what they are farming."

The winner is not notified prior to receiving the award from the committee.

"The committee looks for those who have served the IGS in some key capacity," Cornebise said.

Cornebise said he has been a member of the Illinois Geographer Society since 2002, and currently is the president of the organization.

In fact, Cornebise put together a conference for the IGS in Charleston in 2007, Cornebise said.

Cornebise furthered his contributions to help bring more geography into Illinois classrooms by working with the Illinois Geographic Alliance.

"I've worked with Illinois Geographic Alliance, which promotes K-12 in geography," Cornebise said. "We try to make geography be taught in schools more than it is and we have contacted representatives."

In fact, the magazine National Geographic has helped make these policy changes easier for those who want more geography in K-12 education, Cornebise said.

National Geographic helps put on contests such as the National Geographic Bee.

This contest, according to National Geographic's website, is to intrigue the interest of geography in students nationwide. The contest is supposed to bring more geography into the classroom and increase students' knowledge of the science.

"They supply funding through the alliance," Cornebise said.

The Illinois Geographical Society has demonstrated a commitment to geography in the state of Illinois, Cornebise said.

Its mission is to promote teaching of geography throughout all K-12 programs, according to the Illinois Geographical Society website.

"I've worked on a strategic plan to enhance the visibility of geography and geographic education in Illinois and the U.S.," Cornebise said.

Jennifer Brown can be reached at 581-7942 or jebrown2@eiu.edu.

CLASSES

Wine, cooking classes offer taste, culture

By Eric Robinson
Staff Reporter

Indulging in a homemade Italian meal, meeting new people and sampling fine wine is typically the scene of an expensive night out on the town, but for several Eastern students, it is another day of class.

During the four-week summer session, the school of Family and Consumer Sciences is sponsoring two Italian culinary programs, which will bring food, wine and the culture of Tuscany to Eastern.

Professors Cecilia Ricci and Camilla Carrega, of the Apicius Culinary Institute in Florence, Italy, teach the Mediterranean Cooking and Wine Appreciation courses.

Carrega's passion for wine has allowed her to travel through Europe, South Africa and the United States.

"In each wine that I taste during my travels, I savor not just the drink, but the culture and traditions that it come from," Carrega said.

These cultures and traditions are exactly what she said she hopes to pass onto her students.

Carrega's Wine Appreciation course reviews the various types of wine, their differences, how they are made and which regions they come from.

Ricci's Mediterranean Cooking course focuses on preparing various foods from Italy and other Mediterranean countries.

The classes can be taken for both graduate and undergraduate credit

"It's a science. It's so much more than just getting a bottle and getting drunk. It's about preparation and tasting."

Stephanie Smith; graduate student and is open to students, faculty, staff and the community.

Thursday the cooking class prepared a pasta dish consisting of fresh egg pasta with a homemade tomato sauce, mozzarella cheese and fresh basil, and a dessert in a glass bowl with chopped strawberries topped with a mixture of mascarpone, cream cheese and powdered sugar.

Mediterranean foods are known to focus on adding simple ingredients to their dishes in order to accentuate each individual ingredient.

After the food was prepared, the Wine Appreciation class studied the process of making sparkling wines and the various types, as well as which wines go best with which foods.

"It's a science," said Stephanie

Smith, a graduate student. "It's so much more than just getting a bottle and getting drunk. It's about preparation and tasting."

The two classes joined together at the end of the class to enjoy a full Mediterranean meal.

With three glasses of wine lined up in a row, the group began sampling from right to left.

After all three wines were tasted, the group sampled the food with the wine, only to find out that each wine gives the food its own distinct taste.

The classes were able to experience a different culture with different traditions, while enjoying a meal.

TARBLE ARTS

Children's art exhibit displayed to community

By Alesha Bailey
Campus Editor

Artwork from different local schools was on display for the community to see at the Tarble Arts Center.

The 29th annual Children's Art Exhibition was on display from April 30 to May 22.

The art pieces ranged from 2D to 3D designs and featured a variety of media.

The piece "Sara" by third-grader Madison Morecraft is a foot-high statue of a girl whose hair is made out of yarn and clothes made out of different fabric pieces.

"Staring Contest" by twelfth-grader Rashell McWhorter is a detailed graphite drawing of a tiger's face.

"Veterans' Tribute" by twelfth-grader Jacob Cole is a collage with magazine and paper cut-outs of soldiers in a battle.

Kit Morice; curator of education

Kit Morice, the curator of education, said the Children's Art Exhibition is the largest and one of the most popular shows done annually in the Tarble Arts Center.

Morice, who helped organize the exhibit, said the 287 art pieces in the exhibit this year represented 43 area schools in eight counties in east central Illinois.

Morice said art pieces are entered into the exhibit by invitation to certified art teachers in the schools.

"Each school is allowed so many works dependent on how many students they see, so larger schools get more entries, smaller schools have fewer entries," Morice said.

Morice said artwork is submitted by April and organizing the exhibit takes one week.

Although the exhibit is only shown in the Tarble Arts Center, Morice said a traveling children's exhibit called "Cultivating Creativity" is connected to the art show.

"From this show, one work is selected from each school to go in a traveling children's art exhibition, and that starts in the fall and travels to the next summer," she said.

The awards presentation was Sunday, May 15, where every student artist received a certificate of participation for his or her entries.

Morice said over 700 people attended the awards reception, including education groups from local areas.

"The Retired Teachers' Association meets here every May because we have the children's show here," Morice said.

According to Morice, last year produced a record number of student artists entered in the exhibit.

This year, slightly fewer people were entered because some schools were not able to participate.

Despite the fewer number of people, Morice said the show gives art teachers an opportunity to showcase the talents of their students and art programs.

Morice also said she and the other Tarble representatives hope the exhibit stresses the importance of art as a regular part of school curriculum, especially during hard economic times where funding for art and art instructors are being cut back.

"That will eventually be detrimental to those students' education," Morice said. "Art influences students in so many more ways than just the act of creating something."

Blagojevich's attorneys ask for mistrial in corruption case

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Rod Blagojevich's attorneys asked a judge Monday for a mistrial in the ousted Illinois governor's corruption retrial, arguing that the government has blocked their client's right to confront his accusers and that the burden of proof has been improperly shifted to the defense.

The request for a mistrial came in a motion filed with U.S. District Court, two days before Blagojevich's attorneys are to begin calling their first witnesses Wednesday.

Prosecutors rested their three-week-long case last week.

Blagojevich, who has denied wrongdoing, faces 20 charges, including trying to sell or trade President Barack Obama's old U.S. Senate seat.

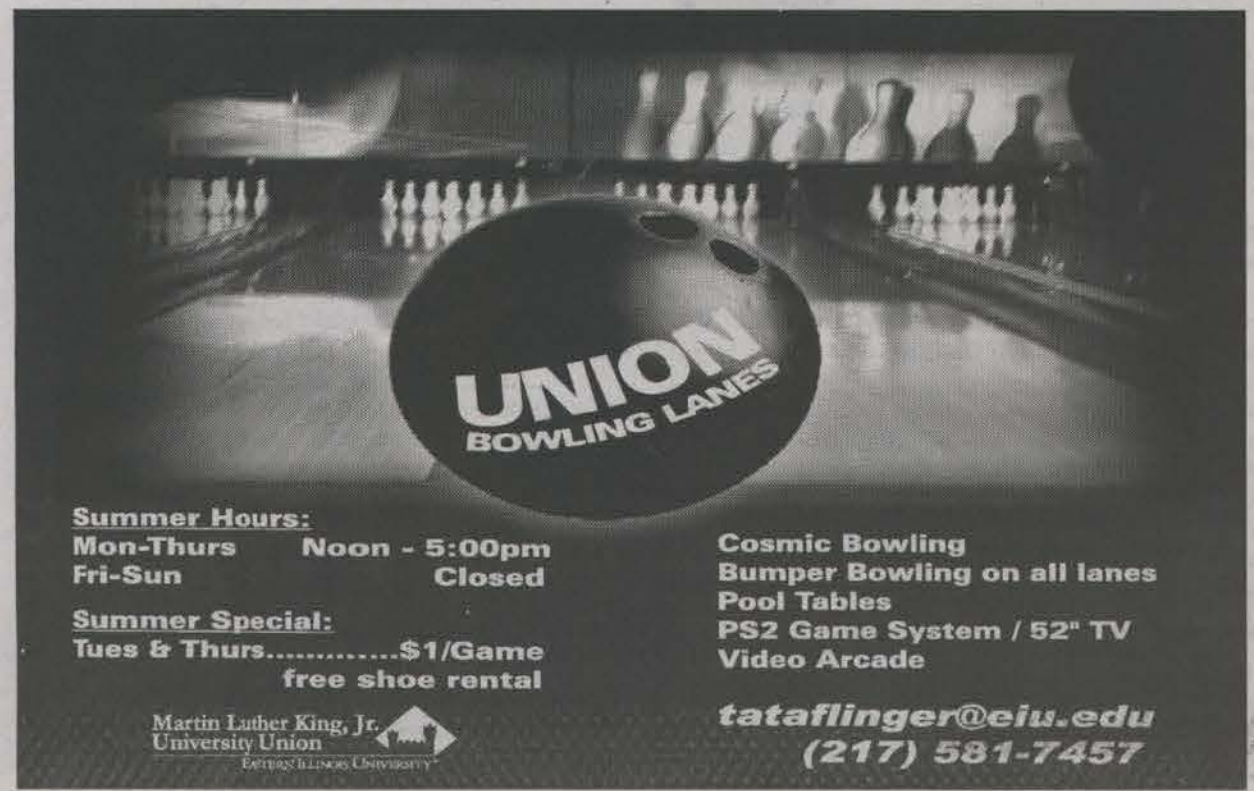

Hung jurors at his first trial last year could agree on only one count, convicting Blagojevich of lying to the FBI.

The defense has said it will call prominent people to testify who have previously been subpoenaed.

That means the potential witnesses could include Chicago's new Mayor Rahm Emanuel, White House adviser Valerie Jarrett and U.S. Rep. Jesse Jackson Jr. Blagojevich himself could also take the stand.

Emanuel declined to say Monday if he was going to testify.

"I'm ready, if asked, to answer questions as I was in the first trial and this trial I'll answer questions if I'm asked to," Emanuel said at an unrelated news conference.

Plagiarism unnecessary risk to take

Students at Eastern have a vague definition of plagiarism in the university's code of conduct: simply stated, it's using someone else's work without attribution.

But what exactly does this mean?

There are many ways students can plagiarize that teachers can teach them in the classroom. For instance, not putting quotation marks in a paper is plagiarizing.

If a student has borrowed someone's work and not cited it in the paper, the teacher can suspect plagiarism.

Many teachers could consider the use of a short phrase without attribution plagiarism.

Websites such as Purdue Owl may be sovereign ground for any college student.

It's the place that helps students prevent plagiarism by having updated citation forms and what a paper should appear to be.

Many teachers use this website in their classroom to teach their students.

However, many students don't completely understand the consequences of plagiarism.

At Eastern, a student risks a failing grade from a course and expulsion from the university.

In the real world, people get fired and their reputations get compromised.

Corporations don't want to hire a dishonest employee.

Teachers encourage students to use campus organizations such as the writing lab to help them with their writing skills.

This center also has citation information and will provide a working draft for the student once they have a rough draft.

The fact is, sometimes students get sloppy.

They get overworked with campus jobs and their class loads, not leaving enough time for the term papers they have had eight weeks to complete.

How can they avoid plagiarism?

Listen to their professors when they teach citations in class.

Write down the websites they suggest and take them up on their offers to look over your papers before the due date arrives.

Take your time and slow down when you're writing the paper.

Double check every citation. If in doubt, cite a source.

When you paraphrase, do it well.

Teachers Google phrases, so make the phrase completely your own and attribute it to the author.

Don't ever copy and paste into a paper, especially from an Internet source.

The phrase your professor chooses at random will trace them back to your source.

The job market isn't too steady these days. Those who have plagiarized won't be recruited above Ivy League graduates.

You may never live this mistake down, considering the fact it will always have to be explained at job interviews.

Getting caught for plagiarism is not worth the risk of trying to plagiarize.

My brothers are not afraid

My family reached a major milestone Saturday night.

My little brothers, Ryan and Troy, graduated high school.

The twins walked across the stage, one right after the other, and received their diplomas. My dad beamed with pride while my mom cried.

She cried a lot.

She cried when they walked into the gym.

She cried when Ryan, the vice president of his class, opened the ceremony with a prayer.

She cried when they walked across the stage.

She cried when they threw their caps in the air and let loose a torrential downpour of silly string.

And she cried when Troy stood up.

It wasn't that he just stood up but what he stood up for that caused the tears to fall.

Just before Troy stood, the principal asked the members of the class who had made a commitment to the armed services to stand.

Troy rose.

He plans to join the Air Force either in January or after he graduates community college. He hasn't officially signed up yet, but in his heart and mind he's already an airman.

Jordan Boner

Ryan is going to community college on a two-year scholarship.

He was awarded the scholarship because of his talents in architecture. He won a high school architecture contest held by that community college both as a junior and a senior.

He is very skilled in architecture and design and has a great mind for building, installing and fixing things.

I am very proud of my little brothers.

I am not just proud of them for graduating high school but am proud that they have plans and dreams and have the courage to follow them.

It would be easy for them to just go to college because it is what is expected of them, but they aren't doing that. They have found paths and careers that they want to follow.

It took courage for Troy to tell my parents that he wanted to join the armed services and stick with that plan even after mom said she wished he would not join. She has since eased her stance.

It took courage for Ryan to enter the architecture competition, do his best and win it.

It would have been much easier to avoid the challenges because without challenge, there is no fear of failure.

But there is no success either.

I admire my brothers for looking to challenge themselves and not being afraid to follow their dreams.

I want to always chase my dreams.

I want to face fear, unafraid of failure.

I want to search for success.

I want to be like my brothers.

Obama shows questionable leadership

As we prepare for the onset of campaigning, many folks are questioning the progress of President Obama.

I voted for Obama being as at the time he was the lesser of two evils, but now I am beginning to question the example he is setting for America.

If America wants to keep up the identity as "number one", there are many things happening and that have happened that make me question the leadership skills of President Obama.

The first and foremost is the Osama Bin Laden situation.

For many, it was a day of rejoicing and closure, but what I saw on that day made me sick to my stomach.

President Obama made the last minute decision to make it so our men didn't have to take Bin Laden alive.

As he sat there and watched in real time, Bin Laden was murdered in what was assumed to be a firefight, although no shots had been fired by the opposing forces at that point. President Obama committed the act of murder.

If he wanted to set an example to the world and differentiate himself from murderous terrorists, he would have had the man captured alive and allowed him the right to justice.

Julian Russell

No, Bin Laden did not give the men and women of 9/11 fair justice, but by murdering him we appear to be just as unjustified as him.

What does that say to the world when we shoot a man in the head without allowing him a trial?

I believe it was a terrible example from what is supposed to be a nation of justice.

Obama has now decided to give billions of dollars in aid to Egypt and the Middle East.

While keeping up the repertoire of "number one" sounds like a good thing to do, what about the millions of people here in America who are facing the end of their unemployment or facing hunger?

With our debt, where exactly is that billions of dollars coming from? I guarantee it's not from his bank account.

I fail to understand President Obama's decision making at this point, and I don't feel that it's within our best interest.

If he is trying to get a good worldwide reputation, then he can go work for the United Nations or something, but right now America needs to worry about America.

If Obama continues to make bad decisions and to negotiate oddball deals with Israel and whatnot, he will surely find his presidential career at an end.

Right now we need a leader who can handle overseas situations but still put America first.

As far as I'm concerned, Obama's handling of the Bin Laden situation sends a message out that, while many praise, I find to be a distasteful and evil method of a means to an end.

In no way does murder justify murder.

LOSE, from page 8

In the second game of the double-header, SEMO took the lead early with a six-run first inning. Eastern responded in the top of the second with three runs.

The Redhawks notched another run in the fourth frame, and the Panthers matched them in the top of the fifth with another score. SEMO went on to score two more in the bottom of the fifth.

The Panthers loaded up the bases in the top of the seventh and drove in two more runners. Unfortunately, Schmitz's squad ran out of time: it was a seven-inning game.

Freshman righthander Luke Bushur recorded the loss, putting him at 4-5 for the season.

On Sunday, senior relief pitcher Brent McNeil took the start against the Redhawks.

The righthander has the best ERA in the OVC, but in four and two-thirds innings of work he gave up four earned runs off four hits while walking four Redhawks.

Eastern kept the game close until SEMO scored four times in the seventh inning to take an 8-3 lead.

In the top of the eighth, junior Zach Borenstein hit a three-run shot and senior Shawn Ferguson, in to pinch hit, drove another run in with a double. The comeback fell short when the Panthers were retired in order to end the game after the top of the ninth.

McNeil recorded the loss, his second of the season.

The close losses put the Panthers at 18-30 for the season. Their 9-12 conference record was not enough to qualify them for the postseason tournament.

The OVC tournament will be held May 25th through the 28th at Pringles Park in Jackson, Tenn.

Noah fined $50,000

By The Associated Press

MIAMI — Chicago Bulls center Joakim Noah was fined $50,000 on Monday for directing an anti-gay slur at a fan during Game 3 of the Eastern Conference finals, and vowed to learn from the incident.

The NBA released its decision hours after speaking with Noah, saying the fine was "for using a derogatory and offensive term from the bench."

The fine is only half of what Los Angeles Lakers' star Kobe Bryant was assessed for shouting the same slur toward a referee last month, and the league said the discrepancy was because the sanction against Bryant was based on both what he said — and who he said it to.

"Kobe's fine included discipline for verbal abuse of a game official," NBA spokesman Mark Broussard said.

Noah and NBA officials met Monday morning. Noah said he emerged from that talk prepared to "pay the price" for what happened when he returned to the bench with two fouls midway through the first quarter of Sunday night's game against the Miami Heat.

That price turned out to be 1.6 percent of his roughly $3.1 million salary this season. Noah agreed to an extension last year, worth about $60 million through the 2015-16 season.

Meanwhile, two major advocacy groups quickly called upon the league to both sanction Noah and help further educate players on the topic.

Rangers beat Sox

By The Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas — Josh Hamilton and Nelson Cruz both homered in their return to the Texas Rangers lineup and Alexi Ogando threw a five-hitter for his first career shutout, a 4-0 victory over the Chicago White Sox on Monday night.

The sluggers were back in the Texas lineup together for the first time in almost six weeks. The AL West-leading Rangers had scored a combined five runs their previous four games.

Hamilton, the reigning AL MVP, got his first homer of the season when he pulled a liner over the right-field wall in the first off John Danks (0-7), who also threw a complete game. Hamilton finished 2 for 4, adding a double in the eighth.

Cruz grounded out and struck out before his two-run blast to left in the sixth that snapped his 0-for-16 slide.

Ogando (5-0) struck out six and walked three while throwing 72 of his 105 pitches for strikes.

It was the fifth shutout for the Rangers this season, and the sixth time Chicago was held without a run.

Danks, who was drafted ninth overall by Texas in 2003 and traded to Chicago three years later, had his third-career complete game, first this season. The left-hander again got no run support, with the White Sox scoring only four runs for him in his five road starts this season.

The game was played in 2 hours, 5 minutes — the shortest game at Rangers Ballpark since a 2-hour game on May 29, 2006.

Hamilton and Cruz wrapped up rehab assignments Sunday at Triple-A Round Rock, and were activated before Monday's game.

"We did lose two good players in Kiley Holtz and Amber May."
Kim Schuette, softball coach

"As an athlete and a coach, you always want more. I knew this team had it in them and I am pleased it all came together. They have now completely re-written the record books," Schuette said.

While it may appear to be difficult to top a season in which the Panthers won their first ever regular season conference championship and first ever 40-win season, Schuette thinks her team has what it takes to win it all.

IHSA GIRLS TRACK AND FIELD

KAROLINA STRACK | THE DAILY EASTERN NEWS

Alyssa Applebee from Seneca High School jumps in celebration as the crowd cheers behind her after setting a new record for the class 1A pole vault on May 21 at O'Brien Field. Applebee pole vaulted 12 feet-4 inches during the finals of IHSA Girl's State Track and Field finals.

Eastern's campus was taken over this weekend by the Illinois High School Association girls track and field state finals.

Eastern hosted the state finals, which took place Thursday through Saturday. Byron High School, in Byron, and Southeast High School, in Springfield, repeated as 1A and 2A team champions, respectively. East St. Louis won the 3A title.

Byron won the team title with lots of help from Paige Knodle.

Knodle set a new record in the 100-meter hurdles, winning the event with a time of 14.35 seconds. Knodle also won the 300-meter hurdles with a time of 43.57 seconds.

The school's 4x100-meter relay team took fourth place with a time of 49.42 seconds. Its 4x800-meter relay group won eighth place.

The 4x200-meter relay team of Elyse Adkins, Nicolina Kozak, Cara Cortese, and Heidi Scheffler brought home second place, tallying a time of 1:43.51.

Besides the 100-meter hurdles, several other 1A records were broken.

Jena Hemann, from Breese Central High School, took home the long jump record with a jump of 20-feet, 1 1/2-inches.

Alyssa Applebee won the pole vault and set a new record with a 12-foot-9-inch vault.

Aurora Christian's 4x200-meter relay team took home first place and a new record when they recorded a time of 1:43.35. The relay team consists of Alyssa Andersen, Alyssa Henzel, Lisa Rodriguez and Mackenzie Bollinger.

Southeast edged out Morgan Park by a point to take home their second-straight 2A title.

Southeast was aided by a record-setting long jump from Alexandria Harden. Harden jumped 19-feet, 5 3/4-inches to take first place.

Harden also captured first place in the triple jump, jumping 40-feet, 10 1/4-inches to win her second event of the day.

Harden was also a member of the school's 4x100- and 4x200-meter relay teams which took third and second place, respectively.

Morgan Park beat Southeast Springfield by just 0.3 seconds in the 4x200.

Several 2A records fell, but two Emilys shared one. Emily Grove, from Pontiac High School, and Emily Clay, from University High School in Normal, tied each other in the pole vault. Each had vaulted 12-feet, 6-inches to tie for the record.

Yorkville's 4x800-meter relay team set a new record with a time of 9:17.32 seconds.

Kayla Beattie of Woodstock high school won the 1,600 and 3,200 meter dashes, taking home both records. Beattie recorded a time of 4:43.65 in the 1,600 meter dash and 9:56.96 in the 3,200 meter dash.

Shamier Little from Lindblom high school in Chicago also broke a pair of records. Little won the 100-meter hurdles with a time of 14.16 seconds. Little also won the 400-meter dash with a time of 54.85 seconds.

Eastern's baseball team needed to win at least one of their three games this weekend to qualify for the Ohio Valley Conference tournament. They lost all three, so their season has come to an end.

Coach Jim Schmitz's crew traveled to Cape Girardeau, Mo., this weekend to face off against Southeast Missouri in a Saturday doubleheader and a Sunday afternoon game.

They lost 9-5 and 9-6 on Saturday, and 8-7 on Sunday.

Late game rallies on Saturday were not enough to seal the win.

In the first game of the doubleheader, the Panthers took the lead in the third inning when freshman Cameron Berra drove in red-shirt junior Ben Thoma with an RBI single. The Redhawks responded by tallying four runs in the fourth inning, two runs in the fifth, and three runs in the sixth.

Schmitz's team battled back, scoring once in the seventh inning and three more in the top of the ninth, but they fell short of beating the second-ranked Redhawks.

Red-shirt junior righthander Mike Hoekstra recorded the loss, putting him at 5-6 for the season.

Panthers look to reload, not rebuild next season

While the Panthers fell short of their goal of an Ohio Valley Conference tournament championship, they look to build off of their success with a strong recruiting class.

"We have two quality freshmen coming in this fall as well as three quality junior college transfers," Head coach Kim Schuette said. "We are not in a rebuilding stage, we are looking to stay at the top."

Schuette's team compiled a program-best 40-12 record this year and won the OVC regular season title. As a team, the Panthers had a .289 batting average while holding their opponents to a .196 average.

All of these marks are an improvement from last season.

The 2010 Panthers tallied a 24-27 record with a .232 team batting average and held opposing hitters to a .244 average.

The Panthers had five players receive All-OVC awards and Schuette was named OVC Coach of the Year.

Senior pitcher Amber May won Pitcher of the Year. May won 23 games with only six losses and posted a 1.43 ERA for the season.

May was also named to the OVC first team.

Sophomore outfielder Melise Brown also won a first team award. Brown started all 52 games for the Panthers, tallying a .384 batting average with seven homers and 30 RBIs.

Three freshmen won awards as well. Pitcher Stephanie Maday, infielder Carly Willert and outfielder Morgan Biel were named to the OVC all-newcomer team and the OVC second team.

Maday posted a 14-5 record with a 1.61 ERA and 117 strikeouts in 22 appearances.
